TRIED TO BURN SELF TO DEATH

Glenwood Woman Poured Oil on Her Clothes and Set Fire to Them.

NEIGHBORS SAVED HER LIFE

Mrs. Robert Stamm, Attempts Suicide For the Third Time—
Husband Deserted Her.

This morning's Connersville Courier contains the following story of an attempted suicide of a woman who recently sought a divorce in the Rush circuit court:

"For the third time in the last several months, Mrs. Robert Stamm, living at Glenwood, attempted suicide yesterday morning by pouring coal oil over her clothing and setting fire to it. The flames attracted the attention of the neighbors who rushed into the house and extinguished the fire as it was about to envelope her body. She received a number of slight burns on the arms, hands and face, but otherwise she was uninjured.

"On two other occasions the woman attempted self destruction, presumably caused by domestic infelicity. A short time ago she sued her husband for divorce, but before the case came up for trial he persuaded her to withdraw the complaint and it is alleged he made promises that led her to believe that their home would in the future be a happy one. The hopes she had formed for herself and family were only to be shattered, as her husband a few days ago again deserted her and their four small children without making any statement as to his future intentions. It is this last act on the part of her companion that is believed to have been the cause of her rash act."

MOTHER SOUGHT TO SAVE CHILD

Detailed Story of the Distressing Accident Where Several Were Burned.

YOUNG LAD DIES IN PAIN

Had Attempted to Start a Fire and Mistook Gasoline Can for Coal Oil.

Mr. and Mrs. John M. Stevens are at Greentown at the home of Mrs. William Willcutts, a sister of Mrs. Stevens, who was severely burned yesterday and whose son suffered burns of which he afterwards died. It was not a gas explosion as was understood yesterday afternoon, but an explosion caused by the son pouring gasoline on a fire, mistaking it for coal oil.

Mrs. Stevens was in Indianapolis yesterday and could not be found until she went to the terminal station to return here. As soon as she was apprised of the accident, she hurried to Greentown.

The Kokomo Tribune has the following story of the distressing affair:

"Mistaking a can containing gasoline for one containing kerosene, David Willcutts, nine years old, son of Mr. and Mrs. William Willcutts, East Main street, Greentown, attempted to start a fire with the fluid in the kitchen stove at the Willcutts home at 5:30 this morning. There were some live coals in the stove and an explosion resulted in which the boy was fatally burned. His mother and his brothers, Harrison and Morton Willcutts, were severely burned in trying to save him from the flames.

"It has been the habit of David Willcutts to arise early and go down to the Greentown traction station to get the morning papers, which he distributes. His father usually arises early and goes down town and opens his grocery store, returning later for his breakfast. This morning David arose at the same time his father did, but instead of accompanying his father down town, said he "would warm himself a bit of breakfast before going out on his paper route. He was a self-sufficient, energetic and capable little fellow and his father never for a moment doubted his ability to prepare himself a warm breakfast.

"It seems that the boy had barely dashed a little of the fluid from the can into the stove when there was a burst of flames which communicated with the can and exploded it. Instantly the boy was enveloped in fire from head to foot. He cried out for help and began to fight the flames with his bare hands. His mother and brothers hastened from their sleeping apartments to his assistance. When they saw his clothing afire they rushed to him and with their hands and such things as they could seize upon the instant, tried to beat out the flames. It was a desperate battle, however, and in it Mrs. Willcutts was badly burned about the body, Morton Willcutts was burned severely, but not seriously, about the eyes, and Harrison Willcutts was badly burned on both hands, the flesh being literally cooked in places.

"Without stopping to think of their own injuries, the mother and brothers, as soon as they had extinguished the flames about David, made ready to try to save the little fellow's life. From head to foot the flames had done their terrible work, leaving deep burns in many places.

"Mrs. Willcutts was in a serious condition for a while as a result of her burns and the shock, but after her injuries were dressed she became more quiet and later in the day was reported as resting comfortably.

TRAGEDY RESULT OF A HUGE JOKE

Large Owl is Tormented by Crowd of Men Until it Injures One of Them.

AND IS IN TURN MURDERED

Was Captured by Manilla Huntsman
and Turned Loose in Blacksmith Shop.

The eagle is considered by most people to be the most dangerous animal that flies the air, but the residents of Manilla have at last come to the conclusion that the celebrated emblem of the Grand Old Party is nothing compared to the owls of Walker township. And in fact, there is method in their madness, as the story told by an eye witness of the terrible scene that took place in the village blacksmith shop recently would lead one to believe.

It seems that the people of that community are so wrought up over the little incident which occurred that an owl at present writing looks several times larger than the eagles that flew in the heavens in ages past. It can not be said that any participant in the escapade related below has never made a New Year's resolution as each and every man, whether or not he was a party to the struggle has made the solemn vow that he will never again attempt to play a joke on an owl, because it seems that they do not know how to take one or they were just not born that way. It would not be wise for a member of that peculiar family of birds, that fly and see by night, to light in that neck of the woods as he would surely receive some bodily injury.

It seems that one of the largest owls in captivity was caught in a trap by a Manilla huntsman recently. He immediately brought his big catch to town and showed it to all of his fellow huntsmen. The story goes that he finally got around to the village blacksmith shop where he made another display of his prize. It might be added that the village blacksmith shop is the place where all of the loafers congregate and discuss the leading topics of the day, and this one happened to be no exception to the rule.

The hunter turned the owl loose in the blacksmith shop. He flew over to the anvil and sat perched there blinking and looking down on the large gathering of men. Several members of the crowd began teasing the bird who did not seem to notice them at first. Finally, when it was thought that the animal would take no offense at the rough treatment, several others joined in the fun much to their sorrow. As the play became more animated it could be seen that the owl was getting angry and his eyes began to blink faster and faster. Finally driven to distraction the bird with outstretched claws flew at Edwards, the proprietor of the shop, who was the ring leader of the bunch. The bird left the marks of his claws an Edwards' face, flew back to his perch, and sat there blinking away as placidly as ever. This infuriated Edwards who wanted to get even and so he bantered his helper, who had just entered the shop, to touch the owl. The bird did not look very dangerous to him so he walked over and placed his hand upon its back. But nothing like this was to be tolerated by the bird and he quickly took hold of the man's ear with his beak and held on until he cried for mercy much to the amusement of the on-lookers.

The crowd now considered it capital sport and anxiously awaited the coming of the next victim who soon appeared in the form of a man by the name of Abraham Buckley. Buckley was game and he approached the bird to show them that he was not afraid to touch it. But he was hardly within reaching distance when the owl, who had really grown angry from constant teasing, flew straight at his face before he could raise his hand to protect himself and nearly tore one of his eyeballs from its socket. As soon as Buckley recovered himself he snatched the bird by the legs and beat its brains out over an anvil.

Thus endeth the life of a bird who could not appreciate a good joke.

SHOT HIMSELF SHORT IN FUNDS

Marshall Benedict, Brother of Ed.
Benedict, Suicides in Fayette County Today.

HE WAS A RETIRING TRUSTEE

And Demands Had Been Made on Him For $1600—Was Well Known Stockman.

Word was received here this afternoon that Marshall Benedict of Alpine, Fayette county, a brother of Ed Benedict, the house mover, of West Fifth street, this city, committed suicide today by shooting himself.

Benedict was formerly trustee of Columbia township, his office expiring January 1. When he went out of office, his books showed that he should have in his possession $1600. The county auditor made demands for the amount, but it was not forthcoming. It is understood that Benedict was found short $1500. The surety company of Indianapolis that was on his bond was notified and immediately took up the matter. This morning a representative of the company went to Connersville and called Benedict over the phone, making an appointment with him for one o'clock. Rather than face the agent, Benedict secured a revolver about eleven o'clock and shot himself, dying from the self-inflicted wound at one o'clock.

Deceased was sixty-three years of age and has made his home with an aunt, Miss Rachael Benedict, since his wife's death several years ago. He was a stock buyer and farmer and was widely known over Rush and Shelby counties. Besides his brother living here, Benedict leaves two brothers, Clay Benedict of South Bend, and Charles Benedict of Indianapolis, and two sisters, Mrs. Emma Steele of Center township, Rush county, and Mrs. Mattie Stout of Elwood.

Three more patients were released from the smallpox hospital yesterday evening and sent to their homes. They were Mrs. Amanda Franklin and her two sons, Arthur and Franklin Tull, who were among the first to take sick with the disease. There are only fourteen patients remaining at the hospital, ten of the twenty-four cases reported, having been cured of the disease and sent to their homes.

No new cases of smallpox have been reported for one week.

COUNTY OPTION NOW THE ISSUE

Eight Petitions Circulated For the Signatures Calling For an Election.

WATSON SIGNS PAPER EARLY

Some Opposition is Found Among Business Men Who Fear Loss
of Business.

The county option ball started rolling in Rushville last night and today it was the chief topic of discussion. Eight petitions were framed for a starter and others will be prepared as the occasion demands. The movement was launched without the beating of bass drums or blare of trumpets and while the matter was not intended to be conducted with a "soft pedal on," still it is the intention to get the required number of names quietly and quickly.

A large number of the business men and business room property owners are opposed to the movement from a commercial standpoint, arguing that the total elimination of the saloon in Rushville will drive the farmers and many of those accustomed to taking an occasional drink to the surrounding cities where saloons are to be found. Others think the move is ill timed as the county option bill may be repealed and that they do not favor seeing the measure carried out here if the law is erased from the statutes. Another coterie are of the opinion—both Democrats and Republicans—that inasmuch as the people of Indiana virtually voted against county option and for ward and township unit at the last election, that the law should be repealed by all means and that no action should be taken by the counties of Indiana at this time.

But a mighty force, favoring the temperance cause, are improving their time and opportunity in Indiana, and are pushing the saloons into the land of perpetual sleep. In Rush county, about eleven hundred signatures will be required, before the county commissioners will be obliged to call a special election to vote on the wet and dry question. It will not be much of a task to secure that number for any number of voters oppose the saloon, in and out of season, and consider it the menace of America.

If the present and first move is a successful one—and there is little doubt but what it will be—an election could not be held before March. The matter would not come before the county commissioners before their February meeting and then the county council will have to meet and make the necessary appropriation. After that a notice of election will have to be published. By that time the legislature will have adjourned and the question of the repeal of the bill will have been decided.

One of the petitions was presented to James E. Watson this morning and he promptly signed it.

Home Course In Modern Agriculture

I.—How a Seed Starts to Grow

By C. V. GREGORY,
Agricultural Division, Iowa State College
Copyright, 1908, by American Press Association

A SEED is a simple thing to look at. It might as well be a pebble or a grain of sand for all there seems to be to it. Only a bean, you say, yet there's a great deal more to that bean than you ever dreamed of.

Take a bean—just an ordinary white bean out of the pantry—and look at it. The smooth white outer covering is the seed coat. It is almost water tight and is a protection for the parts that lie within. On one side you will notice a very conspicuous spot. This is the seed scar and is the place where the little stem that fastened the bean to the pod was attached. Near one end of the seed scar, or hilum, as the botanists call it, is a small round hole, the micropyle. If you put a bean in water it will soon begin to swell because of the water which it absorbs through the micropyle.

Now, take a bean that has been soaked for a few hours. The seed coat will come off easily. The part of the bean that is inside is found to be split in two lengthwise. These two halves are called cotyledons, which is only another name for seed leaves. Spread the cotyledons apart carefully. If you look closely you can see a little plant tucked snugly away between them. Just to one side of the middle is a small stem, the caudicle. Fastened to it is the plumule, a tiny bunch of leaves so small that you may have difficulty in making them out. Farther on, at the end of the bean, is the stubby root, or radicle. These different parts are found in every seed, no matter how small.

FIG. I.—A LITTLE BEAN PLANT.

Now that you have seen what is in the bean, examine a pumpkin seed in the same way. It is much the same inside as the bean, only flatter. The hilum is at the pointed end, and the plumule is so small that you may not be able to see it at all. In these two seeds there are only two main parts, the seed coat and the little plant. By far the greater part of the room inside the seed coat is taken up by the fleshy seed leaves.

Now let us look at a different kind of a seed. Take a kernel of corn that has been soaked for several hours and cut it in two lengthwise the narrow way. The back of the grain is made up in part of a hard, flinty substance and in part of a white, mealy layer. A large part of the front of the kernel is taken up by the soft, oily germ.

Look at the cut section of the germ carefully. The little plant can be made out very plainly. The little pointed stem which points upward and outward is the cotyledon. There is only one cotyledon in corn instead of two, as in the other seeds you have examined. If you will take a cotyledon of a corn plant that has been left in a warm place until it has commenced to grow and cut it in two lengthwise you will see that the inside is packed with layers of tiny leaves ready to unfold as soon as their turn comes. This is the plumule. The other parts of the little corn plant you will be able to make out with little trouble.

You have doubtless been wondering what the rest of the kernel, the part back of the germ, is for. While it is not a part of the plant itself, it is of very great use to it, as we shall see. The little plant when it begins to grow must have food. At first it has no roots to get this food from the soil, so it must get its nourishment from some other source. This source is the part of the kernel outside of the germ itself, or the endosperm. In the pumpkin seed and the bean the endosperm and the cotyledons are the same—that is, the food material is stored in the large, fleshy seed leaves.

This food material consists largely of starch and oil. Neither of these can be used by the developing plant without first being changed to a liquid form. This is one of the reasons why seeds will not germinate without water. The other reason is that the water is needed to soften the seed coat so the plant can get out. But this starch and oil will not dissolve in water without first being changed to a soluble form. This is accomplished by means of ferments called enzymes. If you will put a piece of starch on your tongue for a moment you will find that it will begin to taste sweet. This is because the ferments in the saliva are changing it to sugar. The enzymes in the endosperm work in much the same way, changing the starch and oil to sugar and other soluble substances. These are dissolved by the water and go to feed the growing plant.

These enzymes cannot work without air and warmth. You already know that a seed will not germinate in cold ground, and if you will put some beans in a glass of water and leave them for several days you will find that they will not germinate, no matter how warm they are kept, because they cannot get air. The reason is that without both air and warmth the enzymes cannot prepare the food for the plant, and if it cannot get food of course it cannot grow.

After the plant has started to grow the seed coat is no longer of any use to it. In some plants, such as corn, the little plant finds its way out very easily. The little pumpkin plant, with its heavy coat, has a harder time. Indeed, were it not for a little contrivance with which nature has provided it it could not get out at all. This is a tiny hook on the lower end of the seed. This hook catches on the end of the seed coat and peels it back as neatly as you take off your coat. Watch for this in a germinating pumpkin or squash seed and see if you cannot notice it. In some seeds, like hickory nuts, the plant is unable to get out until the seed coat is cracked by the frost or in some other way.

We have seen that a seed cannot start to grow unless it has moisture, warmth and air. It not only needs these, but it needs them in the proper proportions. In a light, sandy soil moisture is often lacking, and the seed is slow in germinating for this reason. In such a soil growth will start more quickly if the soil is packed tightly around the seed. The seed will soak up moisture more rapidly if the particles of soil are in close contact with it on all sides. Packing down the soil in the row with the flat side of a hoe or with a board or with the broad, flat planter wheels in the field helps the seed to absorb moisture and so hastens germination.

In a heavy, sticky clay soil there is usually plenty of moisture, but air is often lacking. If such a soil is packed down too tightly over the seed the particles are forced so closely together that very little air can get through, and hence germination is delayed. In a soil of this kind seeds should never be planted very deeply.

The most important factor of all is warmth. A cold soil may have moisture and air in exactly the right amounts, and still the seed will not start to develop. Even if it does begin to grow progress will be slow, and the plant will have a weak, unhealthy look. It is of the utmost importance to wait until the seed bed is warm before planting the seed. Many seeds which would rot or produce only spindling stalks if planted in a cold soil will grow into strong plants if planting is delayed until the soil has become warm. Any seed will make a stronger, better producing plant if it has a warm seed bed to start from.

The rapidity with which soil will warm up in the spring depends a great deal upon the nature of the soil itself. A sandy soil warms up quickly because the air can get down into it easily, thus warming it all the way through at once. Another reason for the higher temperature of sandy soil is its greater dryness. As long as water is evaporating rapidly the ground will be cold. The process of evaporation requires a great deal of heat.

FIG. II.—HOW A SQUASH PLANT TAKES OFF ITS SEED COAT.

We can help the soil to become warm in the spring, then, by doing all that we can to check evaporation. Did you ever notice how quickly the surface of a wet field became dry after it had been harrowed? This is because stirring and loosening the soil stops the water from coming up from below. The water in the loose upper layer soon evaporates, and after that the heat is used in warming the soil instead of turning the water into vapor. Of course if we are not going to allow the surplus water to be given off by evaporation we must provide tile drains and ditches to carry it away. We shall study more about drainage and the movement of water through the soil in another article.

Lesson II.—First Quarter, For Jan. 10, 1909.

THE INTERNATIONAL SERIES.

Text of the Lesson, Act ii, 1-21—Memory Verses, 2-4—Golden Text, John xiv, 16, 17—Commentary Prepared by Rev. D. M. Stearns.

[Copyright, 1908, by American Press Association.]

On that last night before His crucifixion He said, "It is expedient for you that I go away, for if I go not away
the Comforter will not come unto you,
but if I depart I will send Him unto you, and where He is come He will convince the world of sin and of righteousness and of judgment" (John xvi, 7, 8). As He left them on that ascension day He told them to tarry in Jerusalem until the Spirit came, as He said that He would; hence we find them in an upper room in Jerusalem, perhaps the same one where He had kept the Passover with them, continuing in one accord in prayer and supplication. The women are there, too, and Mary, His mother, and His own brethren (Acts i, 14), who had evidently come to the point of receiving their brother as the Messiah. Contrast John vii, 5. I think this is the last mention of Mary, His mother. How blessed to say farewell to her till we meet her in glory at a prayer meeting! "With one accord" is a very important phrase in this book.
It is used just seven times in a good connection and four times in a bad one (I, 14; ii, 1, 46; iv, 24; v, 12; viii, 6;
xv, 25, and vii, 57; xii, 20; xviii, 12;
xix, 29).

This is suggestive also, for seven is the greatest number denoting perfection, while four is the worldwide number, and we know that the whole world
lieth in the wicked one (I John v, 19, R. V.). Seven is also a three and a four, the Trinity and the resurrection, on behalf of the whole world. If any do not see significance in numbers, let them be teachable and patient with those who do. If believers could only be of one accord, what great things might be seen in answer to prayer and patient waiting upon God! Whether the election of Matthias was of God or only of Peter and the others, we may perhaps not be able to decide till we know as we are known. We shall surely know when we see the twelve thrones occupied of which Jesus spake.

Ten days having passed since He left them, which, added to the forty days between resurrection and ascension,
completed the fifty of Lev. xxiii, 12-16,
they being with one accord in one place, the Holy Spirit came as promised, accompanied by a sound from heaven as of a rushing, mighty wind, which filled all the house where they were sitting. There appeared unto them cloven tongues, like as of fire, and it sat upon each of them, and they were all filled with the Holy Ghost and began to speak with other tongues
as the Spirit gave them utterance (verses 2-4). Thus was His word before His ascension fulfilled, "Ye shall be baptized with the Holy Ghost not many days hence" (I, 5). The women present must have been filled as well as the men. This filling was not sufficient for all future time, for we find some of the same people filled from time to time, again and again (iv, 8, 31). In chapter x, 44, 46, we read that the Spirit fell on those to whom Peter was speaking, even as he preached the word to them, and they also spake

with tongues and magnified God.

When tongues were given there was always a reason why. In our lesson story there were gathered at Jerusalem devout men out of every nation under heaven (5), and in their own native tongue they heard these men speak the wonderful words of God (11). In the Babel story of rebellion against God, all people being of one language,
they were caused by God to speak
many, to their own confusion (Gen.
xi), but here at Pentecost people of one language were enabled to speak many languages, to the glory of God. There seems to be somewhat of the gift of tongues granted by God again in these days (1908), but it is to be feared that there is much that is not of God, much delusion by the wicked one. There is great need to study closely I Cor. xiv, with special attention to verses 5, 9, 19.
A greater test of the Spirit's presence and power and working than any other gift is that of the love described in I Cor. xiii. The love that exalteth the Lord alone, that unites believers in one great desire to magnify Him regardless of all sects or divisions of the church and to give the glorious gospel to all the world as quickly as possible—this is the filling of the Spirit to be greatly desired.

At Pentecost many mockingly said,
"These men are full of new wine" (verse 13), but Peter became the mouthpiece of the Holy Spirit to call their attention to the prophecy of Joel (and other Scriptures to be considered in our next lesson) and that this was a fulfillment of that prophecy concerning the outpouring of the Holy Spirit.
It was said by a man of God that prophecy has many a germinant and springing accomplishment throughout the ages, while the complete fulfillment may be for some future period.
That the complete fulfillment of Joel's prophecy will be in connection with the return of Christ in power and glory is evident from our Lord's own words in Matt. xxiv, 29, 30. Joel iii, 1, 2, shows that it will be in connection with the resurrection of Israel and the judgment of nations which precedes the millennium of Christ's personal reign to subdue all things unto Himself. The special word for every believer now is Eph. v, 13-21.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR.

Prayer Meeting Topic For the Week
Beginning Jan. 10, 1909.

By REV. S. H. DOYLE.
Topic—Living for the day or eternity.—
Heb. vi, 15, 16; Matt. xvi, 24-27.

God has given us a choice between two worlds—the present and the future. To give each the supreme place in our hearts and lives is impossible.
We may have whichever we desire,
but no man can have both. We cannot live supremely for both the present and eternity. The question, therefore, as to which one we shall live for becomes a most serious one. Shall we live for today or for eternity? Each one must answer that question for himself. There is no escape from it.
We cannot dodge the issue. We cannot ignore it or neglect it.

It would seem that as between two such issues there would be no doubt as to our choice. When we compare time with eternity we would suppose that all would naturally say, "We will live for eternity." But the fact is that the natural tendency of mankind
is to live for today, for the present.
The present is seen, it is so real to us, and eternity seems so far away. Many therefore conclude that the present is sure and they will live for it and run the risk of there being an endless life beyond the grave. Yet what an awful mistake! The invisible is not unreal.
Indeed, the unseen things even in this life are often the most real and most powerful. What power on earth is greater than gravitation? It holds the universe together. Yet it is invisible, unseen. What is more real and more inspiring than a mother's love? Yet who ever saw a mother's love? If we can believe in the reality of the unseen in this life, much more should we believe in the reality of the future life, though unseen, upon the testimony of God's word and upon the cravings of our own hearts for immortality and since the immortality
of the soul demands an eternity.

The temporality of this life should inspire us to live for eternity. "The things which are seen are temporal." All things that we see have been made.
Once they did not exist, and hence
they will at some time cease to exist.
Therefore we should "look not at the things which are seen, but at the things which are not seen, for the things which are seen are temporal,
but the things which are not seen are eternal." How temporal worldly things! Wealth, pleasure, fame, power, position, all may fade away in a day, and if they do not leave us we shall soon leave them and may be called to do so at any moment. What folly, then, to bound our lives by the cradle and the grave when their boundaries may be eternal! If we could gain all this present life it would not pay us if the price we paid were the eternal loss of our lives. Through Jesus Christ alone we may obtain eternal life. Let us accept it in Him and through Him give eternity the supreme place in our lives.

Eternity! Eternity!
How long art thou eternity?
As long as God is God, so long Endure the pains of hell and wrong,
So long the joys of heaven remain.
Oh, lasting joy! Oh, lasting pain!
Ponder, O man, eternity!

Christian Endeavor's Firm Friend.

Rev. Jesse Hill is the new pastor of Williston church, Portland, Me., the church of which Dr. Clark was pastor when he organized the first Christian Endeavor society. Mr. Hill is forty years old. His boyhood was spent in Pennsylvania and Illinois, where he made muscle as a coal breaker boy and a farmer's helper. The son of a minister, he decided for this greatest of all callings and graduated from Oberlin seminary in 1893. Until he went to Williston church a few months ago his entire ministerial life had been passed in Ohio, where he was one of the most eloquent and able of ministers. He was made moderator of the State Congregational association, and other high church honors were bestowed upon him. Mr. Hill was a man of great influence in the community. A courageous and ardent advocate of temperance, he made insistent and effective war on the saloons, and he won the admiration of every one for his frank manliness.

Mr. Hill's oratorical powers and buoyant good cheer will make him a favorite among Christian Endeavorers everywhere. He has always been a firm friend of Christian Endeavor.

WAITING FOR NEW GOVERNOR

Legislature to Rest on Oars Awaiting New Pilot.

THE INAUGURAL CEREMONIES

Active Preparations Are Now Being Made for the Inauguration of Governor-Elect Marshall Next Monday
—Committees From Both Houses
Have the Matter in Hand—Legislature Was in Session Long Enough
Today to Hear Governor Hanly's
Final Message, One of the Longest on Record.

Indianapolis, Jan. 8.—The legislature was in session long enough today to listen to Governor Hanly's message. The governor delivered it himself. It contained over 20,000 words and was one of the longest state documents ever presented to an Indiana legislature.

It is not likely that the legislature will get down to more serious business until after Governor Marshall is inaugurated Monday. Many members are carrying around pockets full of bills, and it is likely the usual number of new laws will be proposed.

Inaugural Ceremonies.

Plans are now being completed for the inaugural ceremonies. The inauguration of Governor-elect Marshall will be a separate ceremony, conducted in the south corridor of the state house. The formality of a canvass of the vote and the official declaration of election, in sight of the law, is demanded to make the inauguration legal. Custom has decreed that the oath to the lieutenant governor shall be administered in the senate, where he is to preside. The inauguration of the governor is made the occasion of a more pretentious ceremony and held where the general public will have opportunity to see it.

The committees from the house and the senate to make the inaugural arrangements were appointed yesterday.
The committees from the house are Charles F. Maas and Albert F. Zearing of Indianapolis, Gilbert A. Elliott of South Bend, and William S. Haggard of Lafayette. The committee named from the senate is composed of John T. Strange, Marion; John W. Orndorf, Jeffersonville; Frank M. Kistler, Logansport, and Evan B. Stotsenburg of New Albany. These committees met at the state house today.

The Democratic members are still so absorbed in the race for the senate that they will not do much until after that is settled.

Electors to Meet.

Governor-elect Thomas R. Marshall
Lieutenant Governor-elect Frank J.
Hall and President-elect W. H. Taft
all have an interest in some election formalities which will take place in the house of representatives in the state house on Monday. The presidential electors will meet in the house of representatives and formally cast their votes for W. H. Taft and James S. Sherman. The members of the house of representatives and the members of the senate in joint session will canvass the vote for governor and lieutenant governor and declare Thomas R. Marshall and Frank J. Hall officially elected.

The law with regard to the casting of the vote of the presidential electors stipulates it shall take place on the second Monday in January at the place where the legislature convenes and vote by ballot for president and vice president. After the ballot has been cast and the vote canvassed by the secretary of state the electors choose from their number one to act as delegate to the electoral college in Washington, D. C., carrying the official cer-tification of Mr. Taft's election in Indiana.

The chamber of commerce of New York state declared itself in favor of empowering the president of the United States to negotiate a reciprocity treaty with Canada.

CLEVER LIGHTWEIGHTS READY

Murphy and Madden Waiting For Gong in New York Ring Tonight.

New York, Jan. 8.—Two of the best lightweights of America will get together tonight in the ring of the National Athletic club in this city. Tommy Murphy, "the Pride of Harlem," is to face Frankie Madden, "the Bowery Boy," in a ten round bout.

Murphy's defeat of Charley Griffin,
the Australian boxer, in Boston last week has sent his stock up a point or two. Madden has been making strenuous preparations for the scrap. He has championship ideas and will go after some of the best men in the country if he gets the decision over Murphy.

What an encouragement to others there often is a kind word or look, and when this is followed up where necessary by a kind act it carries many a man safely over some difficulty and puts new heart into him.

The United States is far ahead of the European nations in the earthquake relief work. It is an easier proposition to send a relief ship across the Atlantic ocean than to arouse the slow European to an emergency.

"Furor transitoria" is the newest one. It has "dementia Americana," beat to a frazzle. "Furor transitoria" is handed out by the counsel of Hains, as a synonym for "brainstorm," which is regarded as a back-number by the up-to-the-minute bunch. If you hire the right lawyer, you can always count on getting something that will pass for new, if not acquittal.

Every naval officer ashore, below the grade of rear admiral, must walk fifty miles, ride horseback ninety miles, or ride a bicycle 100 miles within three consecutive days, or be retired. They are given until July 1 to get in training for the stunt, and most of them will need every day of the time. This may read like a joke, but it isn't, even if it does make outsiders laugh a little.

It is stated that the large catalogue houses experienced a shrinking in business the past year amounting to $10,000,000. This was mainly due to the greater activity and systematic efforts put forth by the retail men and their trade journals all over the country. This is gratifying to the retail trade and indicates one of the most effective ways of combating the catalogue houses and of keeping trade at home. If the retail merchants would realize more than some of them do that what the catalogue is to the mail order houses, that the home papers are to the local merchants, the business of mail order firms would show a still further decline to the great gain of the home trade and the prosperity of the home town. Business firms have tried all kinds of advertising, but experience proves that the most profitable is attractive and liberal advertising in the local paper or papers.

TO GIVE CONCERT HERE IN MARCH

Wabash College Glee Club Will Appear Here on the Evening of March 20.

MADE GOOD IMPRESSION HERE

Manager H. J. Gibson of the Wabash college mandolin and glee club, was in this city yesterday and completed arrangements for the appearance of the club here on Saturday evening, March 20. It will be remembered that the club gave a matinee performance in the Graham high school building last spring and made a decided impression upon their audience. They will appear here in the evening on the next occasion and for this reason will be enabled to give a longer and better concert.

Here's Where the Fun Comes In

When the Royal Rushers house party was opened at "Dew Drop Inn" in East Sixth street, Dr. Lowell M. Green chuckled himself thinking that because of the close proximity to his residence he would be sure to have a call during their stay to treat "a-cute-gass-treat-us," or earache, if not to set a limb or operate for appendicitis. But when the time came that the physician's aid might have been necessary, the young ladies afflicted proved themselves equal to the emergency as in every other case and swallowed about two yards of string holding firmly to the end, then gently pulled and was soon as good as before, suffering but slight weakness. But Dr. Green is still House physician and will no doubt still have an opportunity to doctor the "House In Order."

HELPFUL HINTS ON

HAIR HEALTH

Scalp and Hair Troubles Generally Caused by Carelessness.

Dandruff is a contagious disease caused by a microbe which also produces baldness. Never use a comb or brush belonging to someone else. No matter how cleanly the owner may be, these articles may be infected with microbes, which will infect your scalp. It is far easier to catch hair microbes than it is to get rid of them, and a single stroke of an infected comb or brush often produces the cause of baldness. Never try on anybody else's hat for the reason that many a hatband is a nesting place for microbes.

If you happened to be troubled with dandruff, itching scalp, falling hair or baldness, we have a remedy that we positively know will cure these troubles, and we are so sure of this that we offer it to you with the understanding that it will cost you nothing for the trial if it does not produce the results we claim. This remedy is called Rexall "39" Hair Tonic. It is the most scientific remedy for all scalp and hair troubles, and we know of nothing else that equals it for effectiveness. We know this because of the results it has produced in hundred of cases.

Rexall "39" Hair Tonic will positively banish dandruff permanently, restore natural color when its loss has been brought about by disease, and make the hair naturally silky, soft and glossy. It does this because it stimulates the hair follicles, removes dandruff, destroys the germ matter, and brings about a free, healthy circulation of blood which nourishes the hair roots, causing them to tighten and grow new hair. We want everybody in Rushville who has any trouble with hair scalp to know that Rexall "39" Hair Tonic is the best hair tonic and restorative in existence, and no should scoff at or doubt this statement until they have put our claims to a fair test, with the understanding that they pay us nothing for the remedy if it does not give full satisfaction in every particular. Two sizes 50c and $1.00. Lytle's Drug Store Third and Main street.

New York Fashion Letter

BY CATHERINE MANN-PAYZANT.

Certainly the times have changed since the days when one frock would serve every purpose. The business woman, even a few years ago, could put her tailored suit to all sorts of uses. Today a distinct line of difference is made between the street and the house gown, the morning and afternoon street costume and the afternoon and morning house gown, to which must be added the evening dress.

The morning street suit we must have and for this there are certain characteristics that are the vogue of the day. Sleeves must be close and plain, skirts should be narrow, long and sheath fitting. (This word sheath has a difference of meaning for street and evening gowns. The fact is, all garments must have the effect of length and slimmess. The new corsets are the greatest aids to these effects, as they are now made to add to the waist and take away from the hips. Skirts fall from the high waist line and the coat from the shoulders with no inward curve. Width of shoulders is also avoided.

A suit for morning wear could be of smoke grey diagonal cloth, consisting of a nine gored skirt and a forty-three inch coat cut with pointed back and front. The nine gored skirt gives a decidedly narrow effect at the top and is perfectly plain from top to bottom. Clearing or shorter length may be used but if not to be used for business purposes, the first length seems more satisfactory. The coat is as plain as the skirt except for whatever decoration may be added through the agency of the collar, which may be notched or shawl pattern and may be braided or brocade or velvet or of the material decorated with machine stitching, the last being the best known ornamentation for a business yet effected. Large hip pockets should agree with the collar and cuffs. Covered buttons are used for the single breasted fastening.

Such a suit as this may be made even more effective and suitable for other purposes by making it with a jumper of the same material if it be not of too heavy material. To the grey suit there might be added an extra waist of grey chiffon of the exact shade as the suit or a lace one dyed to match, an idea that is very fashionable just now. The extra waist may be of another material, but to be up to date should exactly match the color. The idea is to avoid the distinct line at the junction made where two colors come together.

Another dress that will serve many uses is made from cashmere, which with an expensive evening gown will put one well through the winter. The body of the frock is mounted on a French lining, which may be used as a genuine and have a yoke effect of tucked net chiffon or lace faced to it but cut away beneath. The power parts of the lining sleeves are usually of the thin material and come down over the hands. The skirt is of the nine gored variety with a habit back, for the opening is made on the left side of the front, as is the waist. The waist portions of the waist as far as possible are apparently continuations of the gores of the skirt. The low V-outline is outlined with a band of silk which is carried down the left side opening and the buttons of the sleeves are also banded with it.

A pretty gown for evening wear could be constructed from one of the new shades of blue voiles and satin. A draped princess style was used as a pattern and velvet leaves and flowers of dainty dimensions were outlined with silver braid and applied to the material used for the front panel parts of the sleeves and the high gorle. The yoke or guimpe is of delicate net laid over embroidered chiffon, but this yoke can be taken out and one more shallow applied where a lower neck is wished. The same treatment is given the sleeves. While not extremely ceremonious in its style, for most occasions it will be found a most serviceable gown and one will perhaps do for a long time.

The fine lingerie gowns that are being offered so reasonably in the stores at this time of the year, when made over a thin silk lining with the addition of some fine laces and nets, make very acceptable gowns for evening wear and are capable of being made very dressy or very plain.

For a dressy cloak to wear to a concert or a reception those of chiffon made with a silk lining are much used and will serve a double purpose in the early summer weather. For a theater dinner they are much liked, indeed they can be worn most anywhere that calls for a little dressing up and a heavier coat, possibly the one used every day, is donned upon going out upon the street, and this idea is not a bad one where one does not use a carriage at all times.

The long coat has come among us for a good long stay. It is a most convenient thing to have one dressy long coat that can be slipped on at all times, that it is not too elaborate and does not savor too much of the raincoat, but that can be used at any time. No material is more advantageous for the all around garment than one of the spot proof broadcloths which are very fashionable at this time. With a velvet collar, revers and cuffs, and big pockets, not too close-fitting, it will be found handy at more times than one could have thought possible before owning it.

One style of coat excellent for morning wear is on the order of the old polonaise, which fastens over the gown and is half fitted to the figure and covers the entire dress. A good material for this use is serge or one of the new homespuns in grey or blue of a pretty plaid if the wearer be a young person.

Skirts that possess graceful, straight lines without being extreme in style are necessary for comfort and utility. The panel effect is made prominent in every sort of garment. Separate skirts as well as complete costumes and dressy coats, show this feature and the panel is made prom-elaborate braiding. On some of the more dressy models the panel is of entirely different material from that of the skirt.

When To Advertise

There is nothing on earth so mysteriously funny as an advertisement. The prime first and last, and all the time objects of an advertisement is to draw custom. It is not and never will be designed for any other purpose. So the merchant waits till the busy season comes and his store is so full of customers that he can't get his hat off, then he rushes to his printer and goes in for advertising. When the dull season gets along and there is no trade and he wants to sell his goods so bad he can't pay his rent, he stops advertising. That is what some of them do; but occasionally some level headed merchant does more business, while his neighbors are making mortgages to pay the gas bill. There are times when you couldn't stop people from buying everything in the store if you planted a cannon behind the door, and that's the time when the advertisement is sent out on its holy mission. It makes light work for advertising, for a chalk sign on the sidewalk could do all that was needed, and a half holiday six days in the week; but who wants to favor an advertisement? They are built to do hard work, and should be sent out in dull days when a customer has to be knocked down with hard facts and kicked insensible with bankrupt reductions, and dragged in with irresistible slaughter of prices, before he will spend a cent. That's the end and aim of advertising and if ever you open a store, don't try to get people to come when they are already sticking out of the windows, but give them your advertisement right between the eyes in a dull season, and you will wax rich and own a fast horse and perhaps be able to smoke a cigar once or twice a year. Write this down where you'll fall over it ever day. The time to draw business is when you want business, and not when you have more business than you can attend to already.

BY THE WAYSIDE

"Say, pop, you look like one of those grizzly old fellows in the Christmas story books—your hair looks like one of the fuzzy old giants."

Thus spoke one of the young hopefuls at the Watson breakfast table this morning, and that is why James E. hustled down town shortly afterwards and got a "regular" hair cut, the first in many years. Hence he will go to Washington tomorrow, shorn of his locks—literally—and looking like he had just recovered from an attack of the typhoid fever.

Fifty Cases of Small Pox There But Very Few Knew it.

QUIETLY CONDUCTS CAMPAIGN

A dispatch from Muncie to the Indianapolis News says "The ratio of births to deaths in this city has been about eight to five. The annual report of Dr. Kemper, made at the same time, shows that there were fifty-two cases of small pox in Muncie in 1908, but that now there is none. It is doubtful if 200 persons in the city aside from those affected, knew that there had been a single case of smallpox here, so quietly do the health officers conduct their campaigns against the disease. Only one death from it was reported."

FLOWERS FOR THE DISPATCH

Eastern Traveling Man Has High Opinion of Fast Car.

"Long before I ever invaded the State of Indiana I heard of the moving possibilities of the Connersville Dispatch," said a traveling man from the effete east today, says the Connersville Examiner, "but this is the first time I was ever a passenger thereon. I want to say that when it comes to rapid gliding it has got everything beat that I have ever been up against in the way of an interurban line. It has got that steam railroad that parallels it in the discard."

Piano Tuning and Rebuilding

As evidence regarding my ability to do strictly high class work and such as will please the most exacting, I submit the following extracts from letters of commendation, coming from such sources as should convince the most critical that my work is of the highest order.

Urbana, Ill., Sept. 24, 1906.

Mr. S. E. Secoy has rebuilt a Steinway Grand Piano for the University School of Music, and his work has been done in an entirely satisfactory manner.

I consider him an unusually skillful workman, and should not hesitate to intrust any tuning, voicing or rebuilding to him.

F. L. LAWRENCE,

Director of the School of Music of the University of Illinois.
I cheerfully corroborate the above.

N. HAY,

Purchasing Agent of the University of Illinois.

Onarga, Ill., Sept. 8, 1907.

Mr. S. E. Secoy has done some very fine work for us in the way of Piano tuning.

His reconstruction of one of our Grands has resulted in as fine an instrument as I ever heard played. His workmanship is thorough in every particular. He has done our tuning for the past year and we have been highly pleased with this as well. He gave satisfaction in this particular to Mr. Sherwood of Chicago who gave our commencement recital. We commend his work most cordially.

"Personal. I felt—began to feel—the pressure on me. There was at moments something almost of menace in his requests and suggestions, an importunity I did not exactly understand. And then he said something to me."

"Go on. What?"
"He'd been hinting at it before, and even when I found him jolliest and most amusing and companionable I never thought of him as a social possibility—I mean among those who really count—like my own people."

"Yes, my boy, I see. Go on. When did he ask to be presented to your sister?"

"W—who told you that?" asked the boy, with an angry flush.

"You did—almost. You were going to anyway. So that was it, was it? That was when you realized a few things—understood one or two things, was it not? And how did you reply? Arrogantly, I suppose."

"Yes."

"With—a—some little show of—a—contempt?"

"Yes, I suppose so."

"Exactly. And Neergard was put out slightly?"

"Yes," said the boy, losing some of his color. "I—a moment afterward I was sorry I had spoken so plainly, but I need not have been. He was very ugly about it."

"Threats of calling loans?" asked Selwyn, smiling.

"Hints; not exactly threats. I was in a bad way too." The boy winced and swallowed hard; then, with sudden white desperation stamped on his drawn face, he added: "Oh, Philip, it—it is disgraceful enough, but how am I going to tell you the rest? How can I speak of this matter to you?"

"What matter?"

"A—about—about Mrs. Ruthven."

"What matter?" repeated Selwyn. His voice rang a little, but the color had fled from his face.

Weak Women

To weak and ailing women, there is at least one way to help. But with that way, two treatments must be combined. One is local, one is constitutional, but both are important, both essential. Dr. Shoop's Night Cure is the local. Dr. Shoop's Restorative is the constitutional. The Restorative reaches throughout the entire system, seeking the repair of all nerve, all tissue, and all blood ailments. The "Night Cure," as its name implies, does its work while you sleep. It soothes sore and inflamed mucous surfaces, heals local weaknesses and discharges, while the Restorative, eases nervous excitement, gives renewed vigor and ambition, builds up wasted tissues, bringing about renewed strength, vigor, and energy. Take Dr. Shoop's Restorative—Tablets or Liquid—as a general tonic to the system. For positive local help, use as well

Chapter 22

SELWYN had gone to New York with Gerald "for a few days," as he expressed it, but it was now the first week in October, and he had not yet returned to Silverside.

A brief note to Nina thanking her for having had him at Silverside and speaking vaguely of some business matters which might detain him indefinitely; a briefer note to Eileen regretting his inability to return for the present, were all the communications they had from him except news brought by Austin, who came down from town every Friday.

A long letter to him from Nina still remained unanswered. Austin had seen him only once in town. Lansing, now back in New York, wrote a postscript in a letter to Drina, asking for Selwyn's new address, the first intimation anybody had that he had given up his lodgings on Lexington avenue.

Eileen had not written him. His sudden leave taking nearly a month ago had so astounded her that she could not believe he meant to be gone more than a day or two. Then came his note, written at the Patrons' club, very brief, curiously stilted and formal, with a strange tone of finality through it, as though he were taking perfunctory leave of people who had come temporarily into his life and as though the chances were agreeably even of his ever seeing them again.

The girl was not hurt as yet; she remained merely confused, incredulous, unconvinced.

It was possible now to ride cross country, and Nina, who was always in terror of an added ounce to her perfect figure, rode every day with Eileen, and Austin, on a big hunter, joined them two days in the week.

There were dances, too, and Nina went to some of them. So did Eileen, who had created a furore among the younger brothers and undergraduates, and the girl was busy enough with sailing and motoring and dashing through the sound in all sorts of power boats.

Truly, for her, the world was still green, the sun bright, the high sky blue, but she had not forgotten that the earth had been greener, the sun brighter, the azure above her more splendid—once upon a time—like the first phrase of a tale that is told. And if she were at times listless, absent eyed, subdued, a trifle graver or unusually silent, seeking the still paths of the garden as though in need of youthful meditation and the quiet of the sunset hour, she never doubted that that tale would be retold for her again. Only, alas, the fair days were passing, and the russet rustle of October sounded already among the curling leaves in the garden, and he had been away a long time, a very long time, and she could not understand.

On one of Austin's week end visits, the hour for conjugal confab having arrived between husband and wife, he said, with a trace of irritation in his voice:

"I don't know where Phil is or what he's about. I'm wondering—he's got the Selwyn conscience, you know—what he's up to and if it's any kind of damfoolishness. Haven't you heard a word from him, Nina?"

Nina, in her pretty night attire, had emerged from her dressing room, locked out Kit-Ki and her maid and had curled up in a big, soft armchair, cradling her bare ankles in her hand.

"I haven't heard from him," she said. "Rosamund saw him in Washington—passed him on the street. He was looking horribly thin and worn. She wrote. He did not see her."

"Now, what in the name of common sense is he doing in Washington?" exclaimed Austin wrathfully. "Probably breaking his heart because nobody cares to examine his chaotic life. By the way, Nina, Gerald has done rather an unexpected thing. I saw him last night. He came to the house and told me that he had just severed his connection with Julius Neergard's company."

"I'm glad of it!" exclaimed Nina. "I'm glad he showed the good sense to do it!"

"Well, yes. As a matter of fact, Neergard is going to be a very rich man some day, and Gerald might have— But I am not displeased. What appeals to me is the spectacle of the boy acting with conviction on his own initiative. Of course he can, if he chooses, begin everything again and come in with me, or if I am satisfied that he has any ability, he can set up some sort of real estate office on his own hook."

Nina hesitated, another idea intruding.

"Austin, the Orchil boy, the one in Harvard, proposed to Eileen, the little idiot! She told me. Thank goodness, she still does tell me things! Also the younger and chubbier Draymore youth has offered himself after a killingly proper interview with me. I thought it might amuse you to hear of it."

"It might amuse me more if Eileen would get busy and bring Phillip into camp," observed her husband.

"Do you know," said Nina, "that I believe he is in love with her?"

"Then why doesn't—"

"I don't know. I was sure—I am sure now—that the girl cares more for him than for anybody. And yet—and yet I don't believe she is actually in love with him."

After a moment Nina's face grew grave, and she bent forward.

"Alise is ill. Nobody seems to know what the matter is. Nobody has seen her. But she's at Clifton, with a couple of nurses, and Rosamund heard rumors that she is very ill indeed. People go to Clifton for shattered nerves, you know. There is mental trouble in her family. You have heard of it as well as I. You know her father died of it."

"The usual defense in criminal cases," observed Austin, flicking his cigarette end into the grate. "I'm sorry, dear, that Alise has the jumps. Hope she'll get over 'em. But, as for pretending I've any use for her, I can't and don't and won't. She spoiled life for the best man I know. She kicked his reputation into a cocked hat, and he, with his chivalrous Selwyn conscience, let her do it. I did like her once. I don't like her now, and that's natural, and it winds up the matter."

To be Continued.

Strange Results of Earthquake In Messina and Reggio.

SOUL HARROWING EPISODES.

Girl Hung From Balcony Four Days Swaying In the Wind—Woman Driven Mad by Her Awful Experience—Fish Found In Upper Rooms.

Many stories are told of the fearful earthquake which recently destroyed the Sicilian city of Messina and Reggio, in Italy. There were several harrowing and strange episodes. A girl in a frantic effort to escape attempted to leap over the railing of the balcony of her home in Reggio. Her skirts caught on the ironwork, and she hung there, swaying in the wind, for four days.

A woman, buried under the debris of her house, although slightly injured, was unable to move, while her husband and children, crushed on the floor above, slowly bled to death, their blood dropping on her breast and arms. She was finally taken out alive, but is demented, not even knowing her name.

A cobbler of Messina named Francesco Missiano relates that immediately after the first shock he and his wife and children rushed into the street. Fires were starting all around them. Hearing groans from a pile of debris, the cobbler made a hurried examination. He found two girls dying. He picked up a baby, but the infant expired in his arms. Seized with mad terror, the man fled toward the sea. It took his party two hours and a half to traverse the heaps of ruins between his house and the water front. After placing his family in safety he returned to seek his mother and sisters, but he was obliged to give up the effort. It was impossible to make his way back to his home. This man owes his safety to the fact that he lived in a one story house. He says no help arrived for thirty hours after the catastrophe.

Flora Parini, an actress, recites that while she was lying half buried in the wreckage at Messina she heard the voice of a Lieutenant of artillery from close at hand. The man had recognized her, but his plight was worse than her own. "Signorina," he cried, "for pity's sake, save me. Call for some one to rescue us. Don't leave me. I was at the theater the other night, and I applauded your singing. I have a mother. Don't leave me to die."

The woman was eventually dug out by some sailors. She remembered the lieutenant and led her rescuers to where he was pinned down. He also was saved.

An infant clothed in a little night-shirt was rescued well and uninjured after having lain for four days on a square yard of flooring in a house that was otherwise entirely demolished.

The Marquis di Ruvo, who visited the stricken district of Calabria, writes:

I have visited Reggio and the surrounding district. The railway to Reggio from Salina and as far as San Gregorio was invaded by the sea, and the rails are still strewn with corpses. The tidal waves roared over and swept clear two districts of Lazzaro and Pelaro. It is impossible even to tell where the houses stood.

The waves at Salina raised a man to the height of the second story of a house and swept him through it and for a distance of 500 yards inland. His head was like a broken eggshell. One house, that of a postal official, remained erect at Lazzaro. The waves flooded it so that fish were afterward found in the upper rooms.

I found a man in Reggio pinned alive beneath a fallen roof. He was hidden from view, but his relatives were feeding him through a narrow crack.

The grotesque intrudes where upon the terrible. I saw a corpse with a vast block of stone upon its head and shoulders. The man had died while pulling on his trousers.

Near the mayoral offices a man was lying buried in such a manner that his parents could speak to him, but dared not seek to save him. A great wall tottered above him, and the least movement would bring it down. Another buried man who could receive help through a crack in the wreckage maintained complete tranquillity. When his relatives came to feed him he asked why they had not brought him any liquor. When they told him that no attempt could be made to rescue him till the next day he answered coolly: "An revolver, then. I will see you tomorrow."

Signor Vidala, the proprietor of a Messina newspaper, relates that he was superintending the printing of an edition when the shock came. He managed to get out to the street before the building collapsed. He groped his way to the Place Cavour, which had been transformed into a huge crevasse.

For the first ten minutes after the initial shock one long cry of anguish seemed to rise from the city. Then there was comparative silence for a short while. The worst shocks were over by 6 o'clock. Vidala made his way to his home and found his family under the ruins.

As he was telling his tale a wild looking individual in strange clothing came up to the correspondent and the newspaper proprietor. "I also am bereft of all my family," he interrupted. "I now am alone in the world, like you, Vidala." It was evident that this man was half crazy. He had saved a daughter from the ruins, but his two sisters had been killed. Later he died of his injuries.

HAD QUIT WORK READY TO GIVE UP IN DEATH

Restored to Health By Vinol
"I was sick, run-down and finally had to give up work. After trying a number of remedies and several physicians, I was just about ready to give up in despair. I saw Vinol advertised and decided to try it, and it has done more good for me than all other means combined. It has built me up and restored my strength until I now feel twenty years younger, and am able to attend to my work again as usual." Job Jeavons, 1036 Lind street, Wheeling, W. Va.

The reason Vinol is so successful in such cases is because it contains tonic iron and all of the strengthening blood-making and body-building elements of cod liver oil, but no oil. Vinol is unexcelled as a strength creator for old people, delicate children, weak, run-down persons, and after sickness—and is the best known remedy for coughs, colds and bronchitis. We return your money if Vinol fails to give satisfaction.

INAGURAL HAS BEEN DELAYED

Legislative Deadlock Causes Postponement.

FOR HOW LONG NO ONE KNOWS

When the Senate Refused to Participate in a Joint Session to Canvass the Vote Cast at the Recent Election a Situation Was Presented Which May Seriously Affect the Affairs of State—Perfunctory Sessions Being Held Today, but No Attempt Made to Transact Business.

Springfield, Ill., Jan. 8.—With the two houses of the Forty-sixth general assembly in deadlock over canvassing the vote cast for state officers at the last election, there will be no inaugural here on Monday next, which is the day when all the state officers-elect would be inducted into office under ordinary circumstances. The house and senate organizations locked horns when the senate refused to participate in a joint session to canvass the vote until, being fully assured in advance relative to the plan of action to be followed by the Shurtleff Republicans in the house in the event that the Democrats attempt to file their governorship contest with the joint assembly.

How long the deadlock will continue is purely problematical. It may last only until early next week, or it may continue indefinitely. There is no opportunity for a change in the situation sooner than next Tuesday morning, however, because both representatives and senators left the capitol for their homes yesterday afternoon, intending to not return until after Sunday. In both the house and senate perfunctory sessions were held this morning, but there was no attempt in either to transact business.

Gardner Served Notice.

Senator Gardner served notice of the senate's determination to stay out of the joint session upon the Shurtleff Republicans and carried back the word that the Shurtleff organization would not pledge its action in the matter in advance. Senator Gardner informed the speaker fully as to the position that was to be taken by the senate organization in protecting the Republican governor-elect from Democratic assault. When Senator Gardner left the speaker's room the call to order of the house had been delayed forty minutes, but in that length of time Gardner had served notice that the senate would not be a party to the recount and that it would not participate in a joint session of the two houses until assured in advance that there would be no effort on the part of the Republicans in the house to aid the Democrats in securing a recount of the votes cast for Deneen and Adlai Stevenson.

What It Means.

The action of the senate means that all the state officers-elect must be inaugurated at the same time. This destroys the contemplated plan to inaugurate all the officers except Governor, leaving that official to be inaugurated after the contest is disposed of.

As there are but two changes in the personnel of the state officers, the ones who are re-elected will not be seriously inconvenienced by the delay, since under the constitution each holds his office until his successor is qualified. The two state officers-elect who are kept out of their seats are Lieutenant Governor John G. Oglesby, successor to Judge Lawrence Y. Sherman, and Andrew J. Russell of Jacksonville, successor to John F. Smulski as state treasurer.

In view of the senate's refusal to meet the house in joint session to canvass the vote, the house held up indefinitely the senate joint resolution, which it had received a few minutes before, authorizing the appointment of a committee of six members, three from each house, to perfect plans for the inaugural "next Monday." When the senate joint resolution was reported to the house by Secretary Paddock, Speaker Shurtleff announced that it would lie upon the speaker's desk for a few minutes. At that time the senate had not acted upon the house resolution for a joint session. Later the resolution was taken up and disposed of.

It was just two o'clock in the afternoon, the house having adjourned more than two hours before that time that the word was passed about the hotel releasing the members from further attendance upon the sessions this week, and there followed a hurried skirmish for grips and suitcases in order to catch the afternoon trains for home.

Close friends of Governor Deneen declared that a plot to unseat him by unfair methods had been discovered and frustrated and that the senators who declined to enter a joint session had taken the only absolutely safe way of preventing a move on the part of the belligerent Democratic legislators to rush a petition for a contest on the governorship into the session and at least secure the fixing of a date when the contest would be taken up as well as possibly securing the appointment of a committee to hear the contest.

ARMY MAN ON TRIAL

Major Fremont Faces Court Martial in Cuba Today.

Havana, Jan. 8.—The general court martial ordered by the president to assemble at Sagua La Grande to try the case of Major Francis P. Fremont of the Fifth Infantry convened there today.

Major Fremont is charged with having made misstatements concerning Major Wallace O. Clark of his own regiment. It is alleged that he said that Major Clark became intoxicated at Sagua and for that reason had been removed and would never again be given a separate command in Cuba. He also is charged with having denied the statement after having made it.

Major Fremont is the son of the famous General John C. Fremont, "the Pathfinder." The present occasion is his third appearance before courts martial. He was once convicted of the charge of financial irregularities and once convicted of striking an enlisted man and using improper language to him.

MARATHON FOR AMATEURS

World's Champion Among Runners Entered in Race Tonight

New York, Jan. 8.—Mat Maloney, the world's record breaker of the Marathon race, is one of the entries in the American Amateur Marathon which will be run at Madison Square Garden tonight. He says he wants to demonstrate that he can make the same time on an indoor track as he made on the road from Rye to New York. Fred Lorz, one of the most consistent Marathon runners, has also entered.

The prizes which are to be given have attracted the attention of runners as far west as Chicago. There are several entries from Boston, and all the large eastern cities will have representatives in the race.

Identity Not Established.

Port Huron, Jan. 8.—The identity of the person who was stabbed to death Tuesday evening in the little rural church at Rattle Run, near Columbus, in St. Clair county, and that of the murderer are still a mystery. But Rev. J. H. Carmichael, the pastor of the church, and Gideon Browning, who lived near the pastor at the neighboring town of Adair, are both missing from their homes, and it is regarded as a certainty that one of the two is the victim of the murder. Every effort is being made to apprehend the other in order to clear up the mystery.

Sisters Acquitted.

Media, Pa., Jan. 8.—Mrs. M. Florence Erb, wife of Captain J. Clayton Erb, and her sister, Mrs. Catherine Beisel, who were charged with the murder of Captain Erb on the night of Oct. 6, 1908, were acquitted after the jury had been out nearly eighteen hours.

Gigantic Forgeries Charged.

Oakland, Cal., Jan. 8.—F. B. Signor, real estate promoter and mining broker of this city, has been arrested on complaint sworn to by James H. Murray, a multi-millionaire banking and mining man, charging Signor with forgeries aggregating nearly $1,000,000.

Chicago Street Sweepers' Headlights.

The street sweepers that operate at night on the more important boulevards of Chicago have found their work hampered and rendered dangerous by the carriages and automobiles that throng these avenues. In order to relieve this danger each man is now provided with an electric lamp, which is attached to his helmet, fed from a storage battery in the sweeper's hip pocket. The entire outfit weighs less than a pound, and the lamps will burn ten hours without recharging. The sweeper does not have to give the apparatus any care, as it is properly connected up and fitted to him when he starts to work at night and needs no attention until he returns from work in the morning.—Scientific American.

ARBITRARY AND LAWLESS ACT

This Is What Culbertson Calls Roosevelt's Action.

THE STEEL CORPORATION CASE

President's Action in Directing Attorney General Not to Prosecute the United States Steel Corporation Is Characterized by Senator Culbertson as "Another Arbitrary and Lawless Act of the Chief Magistrate"—House Hands Out an Intimation of Its Regards for the President.

Washington, Jan. 8.—Characterizing the action of the president in directing the attorney-general not to prosecute the United States Steel Corporation for its absorption of the Tennessee Coal and Iron Company as "another arbitrary and lawless act of the chief magistrate," Senator Culbertson, of Texas, introduced a resolution in the senate instructing the committee on the judiciary to report at as early a day as practicable whether in the opinion of that committee the president was authorized to permit such absorption.

Mr. Culbertson, at considerable length, criticized the president and insisted that congress had the right to give directions to a head of an executive department under certain conditions.

Senator Hopkins declared that the Texas senator was not properly representing the president and said that Mr. Roosevelt had not approved the action of the steel corporation, but that he had merely "not felt it his duty to oppose such action."

Senator Foraker gave notice that he would speak on the Brownsville affair next Monday, when he said he would ask to make his bill for the relief of the soldiers of the 25th regiment the unfinished business of the senate.

An amendment was reported to the senate from the committee on finance providing for an increase of the salary of the president to $100,000 and of the salary of the vice-president and the speaker of the house of representatives to $20,000 each.

LAY IT ON THE TABLES.

This is Committee's Recommendation Regarding Objectionable Paragraph.

Washington, Jan. 8.—As disrespectful and unresponsive to the inquiry of the house, the Perkins committee, when it reported today recommended that President Roosevelt's secret service message of January 4 be laid on the table. A similar request was made for the tabling of that portion of the president's annual message relating to the secret service on the ground that it reflects upon the integrity of the members of the house. The unusual and extreme course advised by the committee—that of declining to consider any communication from any source which in the judgment of the house is not respectful—created a sensation when it was read.

The report of the committee included the paragraph of the president's annual message which refers to the secret service and suggests that the reason congress restricted its use was because members of congress themselves did not wish to be investigated. This was followed by an excerpt from the message of January 4 in response to the request made by the house for an explanation of the language used by the president which had been interpreted by the house as a reflection on the integrity of its membership. After setting forth the statement of the president that the house had failed to understand his message the report of the special committee said that the language itself will be judged according to the accepted interpretations of the English language.

That the house is charged only with its responsibility to the people and to preserve its own dignity asserted with great force. It was asserted that the language in question was unjustified and without basis of fact and that it constituted a breach of the privileges of the house. For that reason the special committee asks to be discharged from further consideration of that portion of the president's message which refers to the secret service and recommends that it, together with the subsequent message of the president in reply to the house for an explanation, be laid upon the table as being unresponsive and constituting an invasion of the privilege of the house by questioning the motives and intelligence of members.

John W. Gates's Benefactions.

Port Arthur, Tex., Jan. 8.—The city council has donated to John W. Gates upon request, two plots of ground upon one of which is to be erected a co-educational college to cost $100,000. Upon the other will be constructed a hospital, both buildings being erected in memory of his mother, who died recently. The hospital will cost $20,000.

INDIANA POLITICS

ROBERT G. TUCKER.

Indianapolis, Jan. 8.—While no date has been fixed, it was decided today that the Democrats shall hold their caucus early next week to nominate their candidate for the United States senate. Most of the candidates have expressed themselves as being willing to accept next Tuesday or Wednesday night as the time for settling the contest. "They can't hold it too early to suit me," said John E. Lamb, the Terre Haute entry, just before he departed for Lafayette to attend the Jackson club banquet. "The sooner the better for me," said Major G. V. Menzies, the first district candidate. Edward G. Hoffman of Fort Wayne, John W. Kern and the other candidates are said to be in favor of an early caucus. The race is becoming so fast and furious, and apparently so little is being accomplished, that the candidates and their lieutenants are willing to hold the finals the first of next week. It seemed certain today that the caucus will not be held later than Wednesday night.

Judge Joe Shea of Seymour, manager of B. F. Shively's campaign, said that Shively will win on the second ballot. He asserted that Shively will have nineteen votes on the first. While Shively is regarded as a strong and growing candidate, his opponents said that Judge Shea had overestimated his strength. Major Menzies and others who have been going over the field very carefully, declared today that no one has the fight won. Practically everyone here says that the senatorship is "up in the air." Hoffman, Major Menzies, Lamb and Slack, who have been counted out lately by the Kern and Shively boomers, seemed more confident than ever today. The outlook now is that neither Kern nor Shively can win until two or three candidates withdraw. And all of them assert that they have come here to stick until the last ballot. Ex-Congressman James M. Robinson of Fort Wayne, and other well-known Twelfth district leaders today joined the forces that are booming Hoffman. They assert that they are making headway and that their candidate has an excellent show of winning. A long fight will be of advantage to Hoffman, Lamb and Major Menzies. All of them believe that the field is liable to combine at any moment in their favor.

The indications are that there will be an open ballot which, it is admitted, will be to Kern's advantage. He is urging that the members vote in the open. National Committeeman Taggart said today that the fair way to settle the contest is for the members to vote openly so that the people can see how the election is accomplished. However, it was recalled by one of Major Menzies's lieutenants here today that four years ago when his name was proposed for the complimentary vote for the senate, and when he had a chance to defeat Kern for that honor in an open contest, that Taggart and William H. O'Brien of Lawrenceburg, who managed Kern's candidacy, were successful in having the members vote in secret. Kern received twenty votes and Menzies nineteen. The Menzies men said that the result would have been reversed if the open ballot had been taken. Menzies says that he is willing to abide by any method the caucus adopts.

It developed today that Slack is opposed to an open ballot. He believes that the members ought to vote secretly. He is looking up the record of other caucuses to see how the vote has been taken. It is believed that enough pressure will be brought to bear on those who are in favor of a secret ballot to get them to change their minds.

There was the usual amount of wire pulling among the candidates and their followers today, but the indications are that there are no changes in the situation. None of Kern's opponents are willing to concede that his vote will exceed twenty-five on the first ballot.

The youngest men in the general assembly are Senator Robert Emmet Proctor of Elkhart, representing Elkhart county, and Representative Emmet C. Mitchell of Washington, representing Clark and Washington counties. They are both Democrats and are both twenty-five years old. Senator Proctor, however, will be twenty-six before the session is at an end, for he will have a birthday Feb. 15. Both of them are lawyers.

Sensor Proctor has the honor of being the first Democratic senator elected from his district since 1862.

Criminal Libel Charged.

New York, Jan. 8.—A grand jury in dictum charging criminal libel has been filed against the Star Publishing company, which prints the New York American. The complaining witness was John D. Rockefeller, jr. The complaint is based on a newspaper article connecting Mr. Rockefeller's name with the alleged practice of peonage in a stockade near Chicago. Mr. Rockefeller's several complaints against Messrs. Carvalho, Merrill and Clark of the Star company are now pending.

WORK FOR OLD DUST TWINS

Volumes at the Court House Literally Covered With Dust.

A number of people who are obliged to consult the records in the county clerk's office complain that the large books are literally covered with dust. After one handles the books they look like they have been working in a foundry. The books should be dusted off at least once a month—any good housewife would tell you that.

FACTORY HAS GOOD GAS WELL

First of Half Dozen Wells Proves a "Beaner."

The first gas well dug by the new Arbuckle tile factory at Williams-town was shot Friday and proves to be a good well, says the Milroy Press.

This is the first one of the half dozen wells that will be dug to supply gas for the factory. There is no doubt but that all of them will be excellent ones as that is in good gas territory.

CURE IT IN ONE DAY.

Coughs and Colds Disappear Like Magic When Hyomei is Used.

If the thousands of people who suffer from hacking coughs and agonizing colds would arouse themselves sufficiently to follow this advice, they would cease to complain within 24 hours.

Here is the advice, if you take it and you are afterwards sorry that you did, it won't cost you a penny:

Go to F. B. Johnson & Co., the druggists, and purchase from him a Hyomei (pronounced High-o-me) outfit. It will only cost you $1.00. Take it home; use it according to directions, and if it does not cure your cough or cold, take it back and they will refund the purchase price.

When you use Hyomei you don't swallow nauseating drugs. You simply breathe in the soothing, pleasant and antiseptic Hyomei through the little pocket inhaler that comes with each outfit. As this medicated air passes over the inflamed parts, relief comes almost at once, and cure follows.

Mary E. Bennett, Peru, Ind., writes: I cannot speak too much in praise of your Hyomei treatment for catarrh. I have been using your remedy for about two weeks, and I have found more relief in that than anything that I have ever tried. I have spent dollar after dollar getting medicine of the doctor for a troublesome cough which I had, and have tried all kinds of cough syrups and cough tablets, and Hyomei is the only remedy that reached the spot. I had given up in despair, but I feel as though I have a new lease on my life.

Hyomei is guaranteed by F. B. Johnson & Co. to cure catarrh, croup, grip, and asthma, and all diseases of the nose and throat.
